Publications Report

TIJ History of Publishing and 20th Anniversary Issue

Publishing three times per year, and four in one year, in total, TIJ has published, up to volume 21, issue 2, 2016 (<http://www.innovation.cc/all-issues.htm>):

- 5 books

- 22 introductions
- 249 peer-reviewed (scholarly-style) papers
- 149 discussion papers
- 65 case studies
- 22 review essays
- 186 book reviews

This is a total of 698 publications. The 20th anniversary issue was a substantial contribution to the field of public sector innovation studies.

Comparison to Top Ranking Public Administration Journals

Other journals also publish on public sector innovation. Scopus' ICImago uses the same method to identify citation of journals as Thompson-Reuters. As of 2015 it identified the journals in public administration receiving the most citations as Administrative Science Quarterly, Journal of Public Administration Research and Theory, Educational Administration Research and Theory and Public Administration Review. Their publications on public sector innovation were reviewed.

- Administrative Science Quarterly publishes on all sectors, not just the public sector. A review of its forty most recent articles on innovation revealed none on public sector innovation.
- Journal of Public Administration Research and Theory published 15 articles, 11 relevant to public section innovation. TIJ published a total of 465.
- Educational Administration Quarterly published no articles on public sector educational innovation. TIJ published two special issues on education, totalling 16 articles.
- Public Administration Review published 16 articles on public sector innovation from 1995 to 2015, the period parallel to when TIJ published.

TIJ published a total of 465 scholarly-style papers, discussion papers, case studies, and review essays and five books. It has published many more articles on public sector innovation than the top ranking journals. TIJ has also, uniquely, published numerous articles on theory of public sector innovation, ethics of innovation, directions for research on innovation, and leading-edge topics such as complexity, policy informatics, and innovation for development. These are topics these other journals have not addressed. TIJ is the most important journal publishing on public sector innovation.

Papers Published, 2015. During 2015, TIJ published three issues, including the 20th anniversary issue, Volume 20(2) 2015. During 2014 The Innovation Journal published 3 introductions, 11 peer-reviewed (scholarly-style papers), 2 discussion papers, 3 case studies , 1 review essay, 10 book reviews and one book.

Publishing Plan The final issue of 2016 will be on indigenous knowledge. During 2017 the journal plans to publish three open issues, two edited by Eleanor Glor and one edited by Mario Rivera. During 2016 one issue remains to be published, a special issue on Recommendations for Innovations in Saskatchewan First Nations Education, edited by Jerry Hammersmith. Calls for papers are available in TIJ at: <http://www.innovation.cc/call-for-papers.htm> and <http://www.innovation.cc/francais/s-appel-communication.htm>

Section Reports

La Revue de l'innovation. A special issue of The Innovation Journal on Health Care System Reform in OECD Countries, edited by Sanni Yaya, the La Review Editor, and Georges Danhoundo, was published in 2015. One article was published in French during 2015.

Sanni's report reads as follows:

Sanni Hachimi Yaya and Georges Danhoundo of the Interdisciplinary School of Health Sciences, School of Sociological and Anthropological Studies, University of Ottawa, Canada, edited a special issue, 20(1) 2015, on Innovations in Health Care System Reform in OECD Countries (<http://www.innovation.cc/volumes-issues/vol20-no1.htm>). One of the articles was in French: L'appropriation des innovations managériales par les établissements de santé. À propos du rôle des agences régionales: L'exemple de l'utilisation des données de performance, by Nassera Touati, Professeure agrégée, École Nationale d'Administration Publique, Québec, and Brigitte Brabant, Agence de la santé et des services sociaux de la Montérégie, Québec, Canada

Sanni Yaya, Editor, La Revue de l'innovation : La Revue de l'innovation dans le secteur publique

Book Reviews. In Volume 20 of The Innovation Journal, a total of 10 book reviews and 1 review essay were published. Howard A. Doughty

Indexers and Aggregators

The Innovation Journal continues to be indexed or aggregated by Ulrich's International Periodicals Directory (Proquest), CSA Worldwide Political Science Abstracts (Proquest), Political Science full text (ProQuest), Ebsco, Cabell's Directory and Scopus.

Citations

Citations of Non-Elite Journals (like TIJ):

The most highly cited papers published by TIJ are outlined in Appendix A. More highly cited papers are being published in non-elite journals such as The Innovation Journal. The social sciences had the smallest increase, but started with the highest baseline (Table 2: Change in the fraction of citations to non-elite journals over 1995-2013).

Members of the Editorial Board are asked to make an effort to cite material from The Innovation Journal.

Finances

TIJ introduced submission and publication fees as of 2015, as recommended by the Canadian Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council. SSHRC provides some limited funding to some Canadian journals. As a consequence of this action, submissions have declined.

Members of the Editorial Board had decided to introduce a submission and publication fee for authors at the 2013 Annual Meeting. Implementation was delayed while negotiations occurred with Rutgers University. Fees were implemented as of January 1, 2016

Possible Topics for Future Special Issues

These topics were suggested by members of the editorial board: Innovations in governance; innovative interventions for vulnerable populations. No volunteers have stepped forward to edit issues on these topics.

Social Media

No volunteers stepped forward to create a TIJ presence in social media but thanks to Cynthia Lynch and her webmaster, abstracts of TIJ articles are published on Facebook. Please see: <https://www.facebook.com/pages/The-Innovation-Journal/119026174844960>

Electronic submission and tracking system

Discussions have occurred with two Canadian university libraries that could perhaps be reactivated but they would require TIJ to deposit its contents on their servers in order to allow access there. TIJ would then lose knowledge of how many readers it has.

Readership

TIJ defines a reader as someone who spends more than 30 seconds on the site; that's more than I spend examining most issues of journals that I check out. . During 2015, TIJ/LRI had 102,076 readers (Appendix C). The most downloaded papers were

Editorial Board Substantive Contributions to TIJ 2013

The Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council (SSHRC) response to The Innovation Journal's 2011 application emphasized that TIJ Editorial Board members could do more to contribute to TIJ. This criticism was not repeated in the most recent application, so this is good news.

Indexers

Scopus SCImago worldwide rankings of public administration journals based on citations 2013-15 are listed in Appendix D.

TIJ applied for indexing a second time with Thompson Reuters, which does not list many electronic journals. They did not respond. While Thompson Reuters relies considerably on the two-year citation record, public administration articles tend to take longer to become known. The Editor-in-Chief of Public Administration Review (PAR), the lead ASPA journal, strongly recommends against indexing with Thompson Reuters for public administration journals. Sanni will no longer pursue indexing with Thompson Reuters.

Readership - Calendar Years 2008 to 2015

TIJ had a large number of readers again during 2015 (Appendix C) and an increase of 84,345. Readership may be aided by the table of contents sent out by the Editor-in-Chief for each of the three issues published each year. Visits to the website are compared below for 2008 to 2015.

* TIJ no longer publishes articles in HTML

Page views and hits were stable and there were increases in visits, unique IPs (individuals) and the ratio of visits-to-visitors. Page views were the highest ever in March 2015 (Appendix C). Readership was up. TIJ defines a reader as someone who stays on the website for longer than 30 seconds. This definition eliminates search engines (which only remain for a few seconds), those who did a search on a related word or words, but were not looking for TIJ, and those who consult a table of contents but do not read any part of a paper. According to this definition, TIJ had 52,206 readers in 2011, 62,023 during 2012, 68,417 in 2013, 80,432 in 2014, and 96,878 in 2015. The one-year increase in 2014 was 17.5 per cent and 20.4 per cent in 2015.

TIJ was read in 136 countries during 2013, 137 countries in 2014, and 139 in 2015. The ranking of countries from which most readers came is similar to that in 2011 through 2013.

The most downloaded papers from TIJ in 2015 are listed in Appendix C. The top three are listed below. All of the highly read papers are somewhat old, demonstrating a continued interest in public sector innovation and the durability of papers.

Scopus SCImago

Scopus ranks public administration journals by citations. Its SJR indicator measures the scientific influence of the average article in a journal, expressing how central to the global scientific discussion an average article of the journal is. The measure Cites per Doc. (2 years) measures the scientific impact of an average article published in the journal within two years of publication; it is computed using the same formula as Journal Impact Factor™ (Thomson Reuters). It also measures the impact within three years. Among the public administration journals listed, TIJ ranked 78th worldwide in 2015. TIJ'S ranking is outlined in Appendix D.

As of the end of 2015 2 there were 104 public administration journals listed by Scopus. The top four were again Administrative Science Quarterly, Journal of Public Administration Research, Educational Administration Quarterly, Journal of European Public Policy, and Public Administration, Review.

As of 2013, SCImago reported that TIJ was the second most cited Canadian public administration journal. As other Canadian journals have come online, TIJ has moved to fourth. The ones above us were an administration journal that covers all sectors (private, non-profit and public sector), not just the public sector like The Innovation Journal. SCImago ranked us internationally in Q3, although we had higher rankings than many of the journals that appeared above us. This is not explained. As far as I can determine, it is because we have a considerable number of self-citations. This is the problem when a journal is a key player in a field. Some journals are publishing its papers when they are ready to be published as a way to increase citations. It is more costly in terms of Webmaster time to do this. We tend to get most of our citations after SCImago's two and three year windows, as our Most Cited Papers list indicates. Authors are, however, paying attention to this and one considered not submitting to us because we were not in Q1 and Q2 and she was required to publish in journals at that level. She did submit in the end, however, because she found us in Q2 in Jufo. This issue has been identified to me in particular by Europeans.

Google Scholar

A search of Google Scholar October 24, 2016 (Appendix A) found the five most cited papers published in TIJ were the following:

Making a difference: Strategies for scaling social innovation for greater impact. F Westley, N Antadze - Cited by 173

Innovation in healthcare delivery systems: a conceptual framework, VK Omachonu, NG Einspruch. Cited by 168

'Don't just do something, stand there! – Revisiting the issue of risks in innovation in the public sector'

G. Bhatta. Cited by 161. This paper is listed in Harvard University's Governance Innovation Network.

Complex adaptive systems and the diffusion of innovations, EM Rogers, UE Medina, MA Rivera. Cited by 140

Introduction: Collaborative innovation in the public sector, E Sørensen, J Torfing. Cited by 86

Conclusion

TIJ is a success at the level of readership but no longer at the level of author interest in publishing in TIJ. TIJ is being widely cited, especially for a specialized journal. We have not yet found an adequate funding model for TIJ, however. Our current funding model is challenging our ability to continue.

Appendix D: SJR SCIMAGO Journal and Country Rankings

Journal Rankings

2015 data available (reported two and three years after the year)

Check at: https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/SCImago_Journal_Rank

The Innovation Journal ranked 78th among 104 public administration journals on citations 2013-15, compared to 68th of 113 2011-13. Canadian Public Administration, Canada's flagship public administration journal, ranked 73rd in 211-13 and 65th in 2013-15. Canadian Journal of Administrative Sciences ranked 63rd but like Administrative Science Quarterly, to most cited journal, and unlike TIJ it addresses administration in sectors—private, non-profit and public sectors (in other words, it has broader scope)—and is used considerably by the private sector.

Canadian public administration journals are ranked by three years of citable documents below. They all have much broader scope than TIJ and publish more material than we do.

	Title	Type	↓ SJR	H index	Total Docs. (2015)	Total Docs. (3years)	Total Refs.	Total Cites (3years)	Citable Docs. (3years)	Cites / Doc. (2years)	Ref. / Doc.
1	Canadian Public Policy/ Analyse de Politiques	journal	0.533 Q2	23	36	112	1514	81	112	0.54	42.06
2	Canadian Public Administration	journal	0.278 Q3	16	28	101	1263	45	94	0.41	45.11
3	Canadian Journal of Administrative Sciences	journal	0.271 Q3	33	36	83	1333	51	69	0.68	37.03
4	Innovation Journal	journal	0.215 Q3	8	20	74	932	32	70	0.17	46.60

Information on TIJ is available at: <http://www.scimagojr.com/journalsearch.php?q=18100156705&tip=sid&clean=0>

Cites per document within two years after publication are still noticeably lower than the other journals. This is probably because of the limited numbers of publications in our field and perhaps also because TIJ could be better known. These journals also publish in hard as well as soft copy and are accessible in libraries. It should be remembered as well that TIJ publishes in French, and since there are fewer people publishing and citing in French, these articles may bring down the citation level. A final factor could be the limited number of people writing and publishing about public sector innovation. If the lead journals reviewed are an indication, this is true and TIJ is publishing a very big proportion of what is being published on public sector innovation. Scopus Imago and Thompson-Reuters are not highly appropriate indexes for journals like TIJ. The editor of Public Administration Review indicated similar concerns at ASPA three years ago.

TIJ citations per document climb steeply in years 3 and 4.
